What are liquid funds?

Liquid funds are an open ended debt funds that tends to generate income/capital appreciation while maintaining high level of liquidity. These funds invest in a mix of debt and money market instruments i.e; short-term assets such as treasury bills, government securities, repos, certificates of deposit, or commercial paper with maturities of up to 91 days. Although liquid funds are not entirely risk-free, however, they are low risk-low returns instruments. Liquid funds ensure that the investors' money are invested in good quality instruments.

What all instruments the liquid fund takes exposure in?

Treasury Bills

Treasury bills or T-bills are short-term instruments used by the government to raise funds from the financial markets and have maturity periods of 91 days, 182 days or 364 days. Generally, these funds invest in 91-day T-bills.

Certificate of Deposit

A money market instrument issued by specified banks and financial institutions to individuals, companies and other entities. Certificates of deposit have fixed maturities, ranging from a few months to several years.

Commercial Paper

Commercial paper is a short-term paper and can be issued by companies, primary dealers and financial institutions and have maturity periods range from seven days to a year.

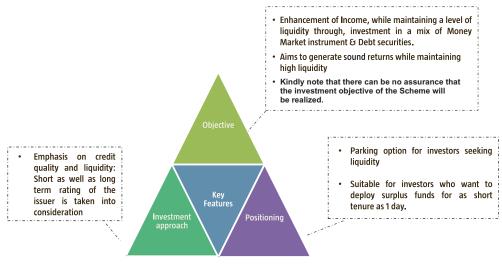

Tri-party repos / repo transactions

Tri-party repos / repo transactions is an overnight loan taken by banks to ensure adequate liquidity. Participants in the tri-party repos / repo transactions market include banks and primary dealers.

Non-Convertible Debentures

A non-convertible debenture is a debt of a fixed period offered by companies who want to raise money for working capital or to meet capital requirements for growth.
